Officer's two shootings under scrutiny

Investigations clear Cavanaugh in both cases, but attorneys tell Melbourne of plans to sue

By Andrew Ford
FLORIDA TODAY

All police officers are prepared to shoot a suspect, but few ever have to.

In 2012, Melbourne officer Brian Cavanaugh did it twice. He and two colleagues shot and killed a suicidal man outside the man's apartment and, just weeks after being cleared to work again, he shot an unarmed, suspected drug dealer during a SWAT raid.

Cavanaugh, whose base salary is about $43,000, spent about 5½ months last year on paid leave while the state investigated the two shootings. After reviewing the cases, prosecutors found both were justified on the grounds of self-defense, and Police Chief Steve Mimbs brought the 40-year-old officer back to work.

However, attorneys representing the man shot in July and the family of the man killed in February notified the city
